

MSc Mental Health: Psychological Therapies or Transcultural Mental Health Care

This MSc is designed to advance the careers of aspiring professionals in medicine, mental health, psychology, psychiatry, and other fields where mental health is the focus of the work. We do this by sharing the scientific evidence base to inform professional practice and empower research that will change the way care is provided.

The MSc in Mental Health programme consists of three modules: Advanced mental health assessment, Psychological therapies or Transcultural mental health care (depending on the pathway chosen) and Mental health research.

Students also complete a clinical placement and a dissertation.

We offer a variety of modes of study including distance learning, part-time, PGCert and PGDip options.

Why study for an MSc in Mental Health at Queen Mary?

The REF 2014 results have shown that Queen Mary University of London has risen to 9th place among multi-faculty institutions in the UK. The Centre for Psychiatry, situated in the historic Charterhouse Square Campus at the heart of

For more info and to register:

www.qmul.ac.uk/postgraduate/coursefinder

Open for admission
for September 2015